

The Record

A multinational nation

September 24, 2007

Deborah Moyer

In her Sept. 21 letter, Give Us Back Sundays, Marg Harden of Cambridge asks "what will be next" after noting that same-sex marriages are now performed at Kitchener City Hall. Maybe, just maybe, families will attend a place of worship on the weekends and learn about their own religion and culture. Sunday could become a family day, and a day of teaching about personal values, shopping for culturally important items or for teaching kids how to shop or what to buy.

Sure, put Bibles in public schools, but also Korans. Ensure that every faith group is represented. Teach our kids that even if one does not have a faith group, one is still a loving human being. Teach our kids tolerance instead of bigotry.

We teach bigotry when we teach all of our kids that one way is better or only one way is acceptable.

I am very glad that Harden is proud and thankful to be a Canadian, but Canada is not a Christian nation. Canada is a multinational, multilingual country in which all of creation should be comfortable.

Deborah Moyer

Kitchener